The largest living animal, and one of the largest animals that ever lived. Incomplete fossils of several individuals suggest they might have been marginally longer and heavier. The longest blue whale on record was 100 feet long and was estimated to weigh 150 tons.

Range is worldwide; migrates to warmer waters in winter. Northern Hemisphere whales average 75-80 feet; southern whales reach 90-100 feet. Commonly travel in pairs. Crossing speed is 12 mph; can sprint up to 30 mph.

Feeds on krill and other small animals by filtering through a series of overlapping plates in its mouth that substitute for teeth. Can consume up to 4 tons a day. The whaling population has been estimated at 200,000-300,000. Today there are 5,000-10,000 in Southern Hemisphere; 1,000-4,000 in North.

John Lounsbury, The Register
